Student Meal Payment

BASIS DC uses a third party billing application system, SMART for Charters. This user-friendly application allows for greater efficiency and flexibility in accounting and collection services, offering various payment methods. BASIS DC utilizes Smart for Charters as an online processing and collection of agreed upon fee payments.

Student's meal accounts function as a debit account. When a student goes through the lunch line to receive a meal, the lunch coordinator will scan the student specific barcode on their ID or Communication Journal (CJ). If the student does not have their barcode readily available, the student will provide the student ID verbally to the lunch coordinator. The lunch coordinator will match the account to the student based on the student picture. The cost of the meal is deducted from their student meal account. If there are insufficient funds in the students meal account, the student still receives a meal and the student meal account will show a negative balance with the associated cost.

Students can pay for meals in the following ways:

- SMART for Charters Family account
- Cash or check to the front office

Insufficient Funds Notification

If a student's balance falls below zero, the student's parent/guardian will receive communication with the amount due on the meal account balance and instructions to reconcile the family SMART account.

Parents/guardians of student's with negative balances will also receive a negative balance letter/invoice mailed home quarterly. There is no limit to the amount of negative balance a student can accrue. There are no alternative meals served to a student with a negative balance. Students will continue to accrue negative balances until additional funds are applied to the student account. When funds are put into a students account, it will first pay off the negative balance. If a student's balance is not paid at the end of the year, it will roll over into the next school year. If a student's balance reaches a predetermined amount (tbd), the debt may be sent to a collections agency to be collected. It is imperative that your student's lunch account remain current.
